ONE OF THE CONSEQUENCES .- We learn from an estimate published in the Gallatin (Tenn.) Exam iner that the aggregate value of property in Sumner county has advanced from $4,405,354 to $6, 837,095 since the commencement of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. This is an increase of nearly $2,500,000 in the value of property in one county upon the line of this road, and is mainly attributed to the construction of the road. There is no doubt that a similar appreciation of property has taken place in every county through which the road is located. All this increase is in advance of the completion of the work and may be considered as only a foreshadowing of the vast addition to the wealth of these counties which will be realized when the work is finished. The increase in the value of property on the line of a railroad will in almost every in stance amount to many times the whole cost of the road. This fact in itself furnishes one of the strong est arguments that can be adduced in favor of the extension of State aid to internal improvements. The State of Kentucky cannot possibly make a better investment than by giving such aid as will induce the construction of all the great lines of railway projected within her limits. The increased value thus given to her taxable property will add immensely to her resources and will tend more certainly than anything else to reduce the rate of taxes.

An affray occurred in the New York House of Assembly on the night of the 10th inst. A Mr. Beckwith, one of the members, denounced the editor of a Republican paper in Albany in very bitter terms. When he sat down, the editor passed near him and remarked that he would be attended to after the adjournment. Mr. B., not caring to wait so long for the editor's attentions, knocked him down with a blow of his sledge-hammer fist. Tremendous confusion followed, and order was not restored until Mr. Beckwith stepped in front of the speaker's desk and apologized to the House for the disturbance he had created. A committee was appointed to investigate his conduct.

The Hon. Thomas II. Benton.—A correspondent of the Buffaio Republic tells a good one about the talkative id gentleman who "never lectures for money." He was going down the Hudson on a steamer not long since, and when the clerk of the boat asked him for his name, the old man replied: "Sir, you have heard my name often; it is common, sir, hereahouts." The clerk still locking at him, Mr. B. coutinued: "My name is Benton." "Thomas II. Benton?" "Yee, sir." The clerk bowed politely, passing the money hack, and handed Mr. Is. a ticket and key to a state-room. Mr. B. said: "This is a civility I had hoped to escape here." He concluded, however, that discretion was the better part of valor, by taking the money and key and marching off.

If the old gentleman cannot escape civility, he at least seems determined that all who have intercourse with him shall escape it.

It seems that Mr. Kalloch, the unconvicted adulterer, is resolved to continue still in the ministry He may pretend to think that it is his mission to preach, but we have no idea that any persons, enterthining a proper respect for religion and morality, will think it their mission to go and hear him.

The New York Timus publishes several letters from Panama, received by the George Law, which place Walker's position in Nicaragua in a very unfavorable light, and the writers also distelieve the reports of the recent victories which he is said to have achieved over the allies.

DISCHARED .- In the police court yesterday Wm Wilson, of Westfort, who had been arrested for passing a counterfeit $20 note was di-chaged. Mr. W. had insocently offered it in purchase of some goods, and not knowing its character. He proved ring. to be a man of the highest standing.

TO EMMA ALICE BROWNE.

BY SALLIE M. URYAN. Away in starry vales of dreams, By ione blue lakes and sighling streams And fairest flowers and myrtic trees And fragrance floating on the hreeze And music faint—and on, so sweet— I too have wandered oft to meet-Thine own high spirit, sweetest one!
And kissed the pale and lovely brow
Whose budding laurels seem to shun

The daylight's glare—but not till now— Though I have loved thee well and long— liave I c'er known how fervently, Young Lioi of my soui and song! Burns my deep, ionely love for thee, Aias, the legend of my heart Whose shadow flitted through thy dreams! I hear thee with a sigh and start;

For 'lisus mourful as it seems.
Oh, I, at times, have envied her, That sad and sighing worshipper Whose heart of genins quenched its woe-In the blue waters-long agol For her love found Itself a shrine And hurued sweet incense there—in vain.
But, like a prisoned birdling, mine Has fluttered in my heart and brain. Yes, I have bowed my head to muse n—what I never may control With Bolatlou's darkest dews

Freezing around my soui. I've gazed far off in night's deep blue With weary eyes and heart—in vain; I've searched the vales of romance through Again, again and yet again. O'er the still ocean of the past With heroes famed in classic song In fairy barks I 've floated fast
And sought me idols—oh, so long!
I've found me many—worshipped each— And rickened at their shadowy charms
And grasped away in space to reach—
A something for my vacant arms,
But now—1'il care not for the past

Since I have found thy love at last. And thou from radiaut shrines hast turned. The storied god of wealth and lyre, Whose worship in thy bosom burned And burns with an eternal fire-Ob, from his phautom's classic charme, The still and beautiful and coid

I see thee drop thy gentle a ms

And wind me in thy love's fond fold White my faint spielt with one gasp To hless thee sinks in thy warm clasp.

My sweetest one, deep in my heart There is a picture I cail thine With dewy red lips haif apart And spirit heanty most divine, And from thy purple palace halfs Where barning glories ever fling A light and incense round the walls
There floats a dreamy murmuring
That in my bosom swells and dies
As if it wandered from the skies— With its faint sweetness every To charm the grief of earth's sad shore.

Years—ages—ay, elernities!
I've said I'd lived alone;
And sent my sonio'er shoreless seas
Where storied phantoms moan;
And rested there in i-les of dreams
A myriad forms before
With laurd hrows whose beauty seen With laurei brows whose beauty seems Less radiant than of yore

But now, young girl-heaven gave me not Thy sweetness uor thy fire And mine has been a lonely lot-Vain is my deep desire, To send thee back a burning sone That might repay thine own—
Yet, dearest, hright and true and strong In my heart-hails iong lone There shines the blessed thought of thee Cherished oh, so devotedly— And as the starlight of thy love Fails on my memory's gloomy grove The cypress fades and myrtle springs To kiss thy young lip as it singsl Oh, when the sunset's crimeon glow Is hinshing o'er the world below, And when the twilight angel's hymn Sweils through the shadows deep and dim. THE ORATORIO AT ST. PAUL'S .- This noble en tertainment, given for the benefit of St. Andrew's morable alike to those and to the public that patronized it so liberally. We are sure that no occasion of the kind ever brought : greater throng together in our city. The performances were of the very highest order of excellence A full, powerful and rich choruses of the most select and best trained voices our musically talented city possesses, with solos and duets, could not but afford the greatest pleasure to all present, and we heard a universal expression of gratification and delight.

It would be invidious to specify in so brief and hurried a criticism the merits of any one of the sweet singers who partook in the festival of harmony last evening. We cannot, however, refrain from mentioning the conductor, Prof. Gunter, under whose auspices the concert was originated and so successfully executed. It was gratifying to notice the cordial support given to the choir of St. Paul's church by the leading members of the various choirs in the city. They all cheerfully and beauti fully aided in rendering last night an era in our musical history.

Mr. S. G. Heury sold at public auction yesterday afternoon the two-story brick house with lot on Walnut street, near Ninth, for $3,200. Lot 25 feet front by 165 deep. Terms one-third cash, and balance in one and two years, with interest.

Also, a lot on Market street, below Sixteenth, 20 feet front by 200 deep, sold for $17 50 per foot. Terms one-third cash, and balance in one and two years. Mr. Andrew Graham was the purchaser.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS. PORTLAND TELEGRAPH LINE.

Office at Portland, Delime's Drug Store, on the wharf. Office at Shippingport, in the Canal Office Office at Louisville, Durrett's Ciothing Store, corner Fourth and Water streets.

The river was reported wrong in the Journal this morning. There were 8 feet 9 inches water in the canal and 6 feet 1 inch on the falls on Wednesday evening.

At dark last evening there were 9 feet 4 inches water in the canal, and 6 feet 8 inches on the falls and the river rising slowly. The weather yesterday was cool and disagreeable.

For New Orleans .- The Baltic is in port again. She will leave for New Orleans this evening. The B. is a magnificent boat. She has large and airy cabins and state-rooms, which are elegantly furnished. Capt. Meekin, her commander, is a kind and most careful officer. In Mr. Jouett, the chief clerk, travelers will find an accomplished gentleman

The Northerner .- This elegant steamer has arrive ed. Her attentive clerk, Mr. Archer, has our thanks for late Memphis and New Orleans papers. The N. came up from Memphis in about 64 hours, running against a heavy rise and doing all the way business that offered. She returns to Memphis this evening. Her accommodations are of the first order.

For St. Louis .- The Alvin Adams, Capt. Lamb, is the packet for St Louis to-day. She is the fastest boat in the trade, and in point of accommodations is not excelled. Capt. Lamb is an experienced commander.

The Diamond is the regular packet for Evansville to-day.

The Telegraph No. 3 is the mailboat for Cincinnati to-day. We are indebted to Mr. List, of the J. B. Ford, for a copy of the manifest. The Ford will leave for Wheeling to-day. The H. D. Newcomb passed Evansville yesterday morning and will arrive early this morning.

The R. J. Ward will arrive to-night or to-morrow morning, and leave for New Orleans on Monday evening.

It will be seen from our Evansville dispatch that the Empire, Chancellor, Moses McLellan, and Wm. Dixon will also arrive to-day.

The Portland and Shippingport Telegraph Line .-Mr. Booth has established his office in this city permanently at Mr. Durrett's clothing-store, corner of Water and Fourth streets. Mr. B. will be found there all day and up to a late hour at night. He is a deserving gentleman, and we bespeak for him the patronage of the public and steamboatmen in particular. We are indebted to him for the following dispatches:

Shippingport, April 16, 9 P. M. 9 feet 4 inches water in the canal and rising slow-ly. Steamers passing through the canal from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.: Tow-boat Shinghiss and her nine larges, New York, Clifton, Jas. Conn, Paul Jones, Metropolis, and Ohio Belle.

HEMP HOUSE BURKT .- The hemp house of Mr. R. Ruxton, at Miami, Mo., was totally consumed by fire on Sunday night, together with 250 tous hemp and a lot of wheat. No insurance on building or contents. The fire is supposed to have originated from the sparks from a passing steamboat.

FATAL AFFRAY .- An affray occurred in Howe's Valley, Hardin county, a few days since, between two men named Willyard and Tabbott, in which the latter was severely stabbed-resulting in his death. Willyard was arrested and lodged in jail.

SAW MILL BLOWN UP .- The saw mill belonging to Mr. Trover, at Meredosa, Ill., was blown up on Monday by the explosion of the steam boiler, and the engineer instantly killed. Two or three other persons were more or less injured.

Iloldiday and Stuart have been sentenced in stealing.

HOAXES .- We take the following indignant stricture upon "hoaxes" from the Baltimore American. We fear our usually tranquil contemporary has been the victim of some remorseless joker:

There are a great many would-be smart people in this world, who are very fond of exhibiting their funcied smartuess in playing practical jokes on their neighbors or the public, and who seem to think that the larger the number of their victims the greater is the credit due to the achievement. The practical joker is, everywhere and under all circumstances, a nuisance which should be abated by general rebuke, and the degree of reprobation should be exactly proportioned to the magnitude of bis clever performance. The professed wit, who, for temporary celet in society, never hesitates to impal a character only to show the keenness of his shaft of rificule, and who remoreclessly sends out his bitter sarcasus reckless that they may piece? and rankle in many gentle bosoms, is justify considered by all right-minded persons a man to be avoided. But your practical joker is a lower kind of manuals sujet. There is nothing intellectual in his "little gaunce." They are as senseless and as stupid as they are wicked and naticvolent. It requires only the most moderate amount of mind to carry them off. The snailest invention, combined with great impudence and a total absence of moral sensibility, will enable them to get up for the public a gisat deception, an immense lie, a stupendous frand, which may result the scrous accident and wide spread suffering, and while he pleasantly denominates, felicitating himself therenpon, a capital loax. herenpon, a capital hoax.

More Bloodshed. - We learn from the officers of the Lecompte, that, on Thursday last, Capt. G. M. Branner, late of the steamboat Belle Gates, and Branner, late of the steamhoat Belle Gates, and Mr. Vercher, his overseer, were shot while riding in front of J. W. Brown's plantation, on Red River, about twenty miles above Compte. Mr. Vercher died in a few minutes. Capt. Branner received two buckshot in his left eye, and was very low when the boat passed, but his physicians entertained hopes of his recovery. We understand that a difficulty had occurred a few days previous between Capt. Brasuer and Mr. Brown, during which the latter was shot by the former.

A MOVEMENT .- We find this editorial notice published very prominently in the New York Herald of last Mouday:

Notice to the Political Fliends of Fremont.—
The honest and out-spok in political supporters of Joan C. Fremont are earnestly advised to form, as soon a postice, standing ormanitiees and clube in energy torm, precinct, district, city, or county of the United States, and this prepare the way properly to enter the field for the Presidency in 1886. Unless the triends of Fremont begin at once to act in this way, he and his supporters will be cheated by the corrupt politicalne who are now seeking the management and control of the republican masses throughout thee nutry. Now is the brune to begin the great movement to 1890 by forming honest centres of union and intelligence against corruption, fraud, and incipient revolution.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

SUMMARY OF THE FORTNIGHT'S NEWS. — The weather, upon which California is so dependent for her prosperity, has been during the past fortnight of the most favorable kind, both for the mining and acceptable and in the second seco agricultural interests.

The news of the passage of the Wagon Road Bill has been received by our people with great satisfac-Comptroller Whitman has also been impeached for malfeasance, but has not yet had his trial. It is not to be denied, our linances are in a state of embarrassment and confusion, which may lead to a temporary non-fulfillment of our obligations; but that we shall eventually, and we may add speedily, redeem every dollar of our indeltedness faithfully to the letter, no person acquainted with the public sentiment of our people on this point, can for a moment doubt.

The return of the steamer Golden Gate, of the P.
M. S. S. Co. line, disabled by having struck on a rock this afternoon, enables me to give your readers some account of the burning of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. W. A. Scott, pastor.

The building is of brick, iron shutter, &c., originally costing about $45,000.

The torch of the incendiary was beyond any doubt applied by the hand of some villiau about dusk last evening.

The building was insured in the Imperial Fire Insurance Co. of London, for the sum of $29,000. The estimated loss is from $10,000 to $15,000.

Utah.—Great efforts are being made to introduce cuttings of improved fruits and vines into the Ter-

Oregon.—Much feeling seems to have been awakened, and a good deal of discussion is going on in regard to the introduction of slavery into the Territory. The popular sentiment would appear, however, to be stroughy against the measure.

The present appearance of Central American mat-ters gives assarance of considerable changes of which the public generally ha'e na ken, We have less doubt than ever about the success of the cause. But we think the work is to be accomplished by a much more direct and immediate use of the weapons most familiar to the companying and familiar to the commercial general, commodores and would-be presidents valiantly leading on the hosts. We believe that Walker has been or is to be approached by both parties principal in the actual outside struggle; and we are confident he might, ere this, have received aid and comfort from the enemy's camp, even to their own destruction, but think my's camp, even to their own destruction, but think the terms upon which such work could have been hired did not suit him. Finally, we are of the opinion that Walker cannot be whipped out by the Costa Ricans, &c., even with all the aid they are getting from outsiders; that the withdrawal of the said aid would enable him to whip them; that both they and their allies in New York are beginning to be convinced of these facts, and that, per consequence, one of these parties, or some from among them, will aid him (or whoever may succeed him) even to an early triumph. early triumph.

That there are moves on the board that will finish the game in a few mouths is our honest conviction. The cmissaries who are continually passing and repassing within our vision, and the evidence of the presence of others in high places, furnish us con-vincing proof that the game is at a very interesting and decisive stage.

Bogota.—The only items worthy of note respecting affairs at Bogota, are that our Government is expected by the people of this country generally, with the exception, perhaps, of a few on this 1sthmus, to enforce the proposition of Mr. Morse or to go further-this is the manifest tone of all the advices we see in our exchanges and glean from our private communications.

On the other hand, the Americans, or a majority of them, fear that no action will be had non the rejection of the propositions sent by Mr. Morse until the regular session of Congress, next winter, aud that in the meantime, perchance even before the arrival of Mr. Bowlin at Washington, a new Ministet may be appointed. We are confident that any unnecessary delay will be fatal to the suitable settlement of this matter, and cannot but he dangerous to the most vital interests of all concerned.

DAILY REVIEW OF THE MARKET, LOUISVILLE, April 16.

The money market is rather stringent. Fastern exchange irm; the banks charge %c and the brokers ic prem. New Orleans in but little demand, and we quote the seiling rates misally at %a% prem.

The provision market was very dull and a decline in both parreled pork and bacon was established. It will be seen, nowever, from our Cincinnati and New York dispatches that an a lyance has been established there, mess pork bein3 held at Cincinnatti last evening at $22. This intelligence will doubtless cause a reaction in this market. The sales of pork during the last two days, including 250 bhls reported in yesterday's paper, were 737 bbis, all new, on private terms. One party was offering to sell 1,500 bhis last evening at $21 25 cash, but we donbt whether the offer would be accepted to-day. No sales of bacon, from store, but on lots from the country a further decline was submitted to, and what was offered sold at 8, 10, and liallie for houlders, hams, and clear sides. The latter are tively scaree. Nothing transpired in lard, but prices for it are unchanged. Sales of 69 hhds tobacco at very full prices—1 hhd trash at $6 25, 11 at $8a8 80, 13 at $9a9 80, 6 at $10a10 65, 10 at $11 05a11 75, 6 at $12a12 95, 8 at $12a13 90, 9 at $14a14 85, 3 at $15 05a15 55, and 2 at $16 55 and $20 50. The highoriced hhd was old crop cigar leaf, raised in Barren county by John Mathis, and purchased by John Smidt & Co. for the German warket. The buyer of the $6 25 hhd resold it immediately at a profit of $5 round to be manufacted for the Ciucinnati market, as its quality is peculiarly suited

There was rather more doing in groceries. A sale of 30 biids sugar at 11%e, 27 hhds at 11%e, 20 hhds at 11%a11%c, 20 bbls refined at 14a14 Ye, 25 bbls molasses at 66c, 25 bbls at 67c, 155 bags Rio coffee at 11 % at 11/2c, 25 bags Jamaica at 12c, a few bags Laguayra at 12%c, and 11 tierces rice at 5%c

MARRIED.

In San Francisco, on the 10th of March, by the Rev. Dr. Scott. In Calvary Church, LORENZO SAWYER, Esta, of Waterlown, N. Y., to Miss Jennie M. Alderich, of Louisville, Ky.

FRIDAY EVENING, APRIL 17, 1857.

TEMPERANCE AMONG THE BOURBON.-Maj. Geo. W. Williams lectured his fellow-citizens of Bourben county, at Paris, on the night of the 10th inst. upon the subject of temperance-rather a novel theme to be discussed in the midst of a 'hation' whose reputation has been made world-wide by its staple product-whisky. Maj. Williams attributed the decline of temperance principles, in that community especially, in a great measure, to the extraordinary rise in the price of whicky, which has furnished such an enticing opportunity for speculation. The prospect of large and casily made profits had induced many men, whose influence had before been in favor of temperance, to invest their capital in whisky, thus adding interest to appetite. These together had given a strength to the "whisky powthat had proved irresistible. The lecturer gave his hearers some rather startling statistics of the liquor traffic in Paris. He said there were now stored in the town about six thousand barrels of whisky, held on speculation, and that there was as much more to be delivered in the course of the spring and summer. That a distillery was now in course of erection, within the town limits, which would cost $50,000. That there were three or four licensed drinking establishments, and at least twelve places where liquor of the vilest description was retailed to black and white; beside sundry stores, grocerics, and drug-stores, where the best article can be had. He supposed that the present high price of whisky would not long be maintained. That the speculations in which so many are interested, would, before a great while, cease to be profitable.

OUR EAST INDIA SQUADRON .- The reinforcement which is fitting out, as we learn, for our naval force in the China Seas, will cousist of some of the most powerful ships in the world. Amongst others, the frigate Minnesota, one of the six new steamers, has been designated. In view of the importance and distant theatre of the service, says the National Intelligencer, we cannot but express our pleasure at this selection of the Minnesota, because the noble ship herself and her substantial machinery were built at the Washington Navy Yard. In this fact we have a guarantee that, when the Minnesota goes to sea, we shall not hear the almost invariable story of broken machinery or of the ship having put back or into some port to repair damage. The immense battery of the Colorado, another of the new steamers, is to be transferred, it is said, to the Minnesota at Norfolk; and it is further stated that Mr. Reed, our new Minister to China, will take passage in this magnificent ship.

The financial circles of London have been greatly excited, owing to the discovery of several enormous swindling stock transactions and defalcations. One projected banking concern has cheated its dupes to the amount of seventy thousand do!lars without taking the first step toward commencing business; another has closed up after sinking its entire capital of a million and a quarter; a steamship company had been defrauded of a quarter of a million; and an Australia agricultural company has squandered two millions of dollars and seven thousand acres of land, the shareholders, meanwhile, being kept in profound ignorance of the condition of

How to GET AT IT .- By the new postage treaty with France, letters can be seut by any of the steamers pre-paid or not, at the rate of fifteen cents per quarter ounce. As the letter scale in general use has no mark less than the half ounce, by placing an American quarter in the scale with a letter, it will at once indicate whether it exceeds a quarter of an ounce, as the quarter weighs that according to the postoffice

Horses and Boys in Virginia .- A boy, who is gray-headed and a grandfather brings my steed to the door; and two more toys hold on to the briole, while the nag switches off the flies with his tail; and three more boys assist him in switching them off with fern branches. While engaged in this laborious toil, one of them—although it is only 7 o'clock, A. M.—falls asbeep against the side of the horse, enoring, with his great bullet shining head in the sun like a perspiring clack pudding, till one one arruses him by sticking grass into his nose. The norse is a fine animal. Nearly all Virginia horses are, albeit bred too line for the English tastes, and now getting proceedings to the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes, and now getting the production of the English tastes are the production of the English tastes and the English tastes are t poor by too much interpreeding; but the equipments! They don't believe in the saying, "that there is nothing like leather in Virginia," in Virginia. It is evident that they think string a great deal like leather. There is more rope used in my accourrements than if I had been Mazeppa, and was to be bound on. The buckle is broken off the belly-band, and that is tied with a string, the check-trap is another piece of string; so also is the left-hand bridle. There is no stirrup on one side, and more string is used to hitch up the other. But the roads are very bad at that time of the year, they say; so I would have to walk my horse, any how—so it makes would have to walk my horse, anyhow—so it makes no difference.

The court-house is three miles distant. A boy is given to me to show me the road through the serub and take care of my charger; and I start, all the darkies on the farm following me to the gate. The road at first runs through a small forest of stunted shrubs, and then debouches into a rolling country of bate bleak hills, with a soft red clayey soil. It is supposed to be enclosed on each side with what is called a worm or V fence, which has a battered, haggard, and dissipated look. Half the rails are down, some with one end sticking in the fence, the other upright, prodding the air; others lying about loose, giving a most dilapidated air to a landscape not of itself attractive. Presently we come to a spot where the late rains have moistened the chy not of itself attractive. Presently we come to a spot where the late rains have moistened the chy into an oozy ointment, which the rays of the sun have encrusted with a hard, piecrusty looking cover. After I had passed this spot a few rods, my antiquated boy of course lagging far belind me, I hear, "Massa! Massa!" I turn in my saddle. "Yah, yah! Is um keep right on. Dah's nm," and my youth drops, as if struck with epilepsy, plump into the middle of the red pasty slush. Alarmed, fearing a sun-stroke, I ride hastiny back. What a picture! He has chosen this spot of soft mud for his noonday nap, and there he lies, sound asleep in a moment—a huge piece of jet set in cornelian—the red glaring sun streaming down on him, and a myriad of small vellow butterflies and bluebottles settled on his body. I shout and crack my whip in vain. He is probably away off in the midst of a corn-husking or a breakdown, and why should I disturb him?

VISIT OF THE PRESBYTERY OF LOUISVILLE TO THE ORPHANS' HOME. - During the late session of the Presbytery of Louisville, in this city, the past history and present condition of the Orphans' Home were brought to their notice by the presentation of a report of the Board of Managers, by Curran Pope, Esq., the delegate from the First Church, which we here give, as it may be of interest to our readers here give, as it may be of interest to our readers generally:

After many years' experience of the necessity of a Protestant Orphans' Asylum in the city of Louisville, and repeated bailures to obtain the co-operation of the other protestant denominations in the city to establish one, the Presbyterians, on the 18th day of February, 1-49, procured a charter for the Louisville Orphans' Home. Du the 25th of February, 1-83, they purchased for the sum of thirisen thousand oblars, the present property, adjointed the city line, embracing the acres with a brick cottage and offer haprevenents upon it, and in the ensuing May opened the house for the reception of children. Before the end of the year twenty-two children had been admitted, and he number continued to increase until January, 1-87, when those then in the Home amounted to orty-two. More than twenty thou and dollars have been contributed and expended for the purchase and improvement of the property and the support of the Institution, and in addition, a two story dwelling house has been erected, costing about two thousand dollars, out of means chiefly contributed by a charitable ledy of Louisville. The property basen paid for, and the expenses of the Houncare discharged by the proceeds of the mosthly collections.

The Institution is under the care of the five Prochyterian churches of Louisville, and controlled by a Board of Wainagara appointed by them, assisted by a Board of Wainagara prointed by them, assisted by a Board of Wainagara prointed by them, assisted by a Board of Wainagara prointed by the responsible outless imposed upon her in the most satisfactory manner. The children aranght the ordinary branches of an English education, and devote a portion of each day to labor—the boys in the garden and grounds, and the girls hu swing or some househol employment. The strictest attention is puid to their religious training, and the not favorable testimony based norme to the character and conduct of the children in those families where they have keen placed. Good bo

This paper being read was referred to n committee of tree, who brought in the following report upon it: The committee to which was referred the paper from the loard of Managers of the Lonisville Orphans' Home, re-ommends, in view of its interesting statements, the adop-on of the fellowing resolution, to-wh:

This Presbytery, appreciating the importance of the object, and highly approving the work of our brethren in Louisville in its helast, do cordially recommend the Orthans' love to the sympathy, prayers, and liberal support of all our churches, trusting that by muted and continued exertions an institution may be rearen by which will meet, in some good degree, the necessities of the poor orphans in some good degree, the necessities of the poor orphans among up.

It was manimously adopted by the Presbytery, after several feering address a by its members, and the Presbytery, on invitation of Mr. Pope, resolved to visit the Institution in a body on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

At the appointed hour on oun-ilous and carriages were in readiness to convey the members to the "Iloue." On the way out fley, S. W. Cheney was appointed to give expression to the feelings of the members of the body, when they should reach the ground, and have the members had strolled through the grounds, and examined the premises to their satisfaction, the children drossed in next and clean, but plain attire, were collected in the school-room, and sang a hypen and were addressed by Mr. Cheney, in a touching speech, after which a prayer was offered by Dr. Matthews, and the members returned to the city.

Bourbon Agricultural Society.—The angual ing of this pioneer in the Great West of Agricultural reform was held at Paris on Saturday, April 11th. The following officers were elected:

Pre-ident, J. B. Clay, Esq., without opposition; Vice Presidents, Henry Clay, Jr., and W. C. Lyle, also without opposition; Recording Secretary, A. M. Brown; Cor. secretary, F. Keunedy; Treasurer, W. W. Mitchell.

The annual contribution was fixed at $2.
The fair will commence on the fourth Tuesday, the 22d of September, and continue five days.

A PARISIAN HAIR-DRESSER .- The gossiping Paris correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune writes thus about a Parisian hair-dresser. He says:

Felix, the fashionable hair-dresser here, charges $12 for dressing a lady's head. During the winter season he dresses two hundred heads a night. What do you think of $2,500 a night made by hair-dressing? The Empress gives him only $100 a mouth, and he dresses her head every night.

THE FRUIT .- The Paris Citizen says:

The destruction of fruit has not been as complete as we supposed. The apples and plums are still alive and some of the pears have thus far escaped. Cherries are all killed, we believe, except some of the more common kinds. Mr. John B. Collins, livingnear Centreville on what is called Beech Ridge, informs us that such of his peaches as escaped the winter freeze are still uninjured.

This is a purely vegetable compound, prepared on strictly selentific principles, after the manner of the celebrated Holland Professor, Boerhave, Because of its great success in most of the European States, its untroduction into the United States was intended more especially for those of our fatherland scattered here as different over the face of this mighty country. Meeting with great success among them. I now offer it to the American public, knowing that its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be acknowledged.

its truly wonderful medicinal virtues must be assisted edged.

It is particularly recommended to those persons whose constitutions have been impaired by the continuous use of ardent spirits, or other forms of dissipation. Generally instantaneous in its effect, it finds its way directly to the seat of life, thrilling and quickening ever nerve, raising up the drooping spirit, and, in fact, infusing new health and vigor in the system.

NOTICE.—Whoever expects to find this a beverage will be disappointed; but to the sick, weak, and low spirited it will prove a grateful arematic cordial, possessed of singular remedial properties.

CAUTION.

CAUTION.

The great popularity of this delightful Aroma bas induced many imitations, which the public should guard against purchasleg. THE WILD KNIGHT, THE UNKNOWN CRUSADER.

A TALE OF GERMANY IN THE DAYS OF THE EMPIRE.

As the knight thus spoke he raised the small white hand to his lips, and as he imprinted his first kiss thereon, Agnes of Luxemburg smiled.

Those were days when true men and maidens spent not long hours in senseless firstation, nor tried to concern the generous emotions of the heart. If to conceal the generous emotions of the heart. If the thought was right 'twas spoken. So from that hour the Knight of the Eagle knew that he was welcomed by the only maiden who had ever won his heart. The emotion was a strange one, and under its influence his heart grew light and joyous and his arm stronger.

arm stronger.

As con as possible the two crusaders put on their armor, and then went out into the court where they found Robert and Bernard with the horses all caparisoned; and from the porter they learned that Von Metzinger was waiting an answer from him. But just as the porter spoke the voice of the robber knight was heard in loud and angry tones:

"Hallo! Within there, thou creeping porter. What is the answer of thy mistress? Will she give w nat is the answer of thy mistress? Will she give up the golden calves, or must we take them?"

"Oh, noble sirs," spoke the old porter, trembling from head to foot, "only last week Sir Otto and his crew robbed the Convent of St. Mary, of Barbronn, carried off all the gold and silver, and killed four armed peasants who had come up to help to defend the place!"

"Say ye so? Then i'faith, we'll send them off howling now. Where is there a loop-hole through which I can count the villaius?"?

The porter led the way to the small wicket in which there was a square piece of chain netting. Through this the Black Knight could count the robbers. There were two kuights and tourteen men-at-arms—the latter on foot, and armed with cross-bows and swords, and wearing the usual armor of the foot soldiers of the period—round shell-caps of iron with deep capes behind; enirasses of brass, with a joint at the neck, thus supplying the place of a gorget; but no brassarts or cuiskes. They were stout-look-ing follows and from what our brass could but no brassarts or cuiskes. They were stout-looking fellows, and from what our hero could see of their faces he would have judged them to be just fit for some such work. Sir Otto was a stout, powerful man, and as he now wore his visor up the crusader could see that he had a bold, bad look. The other knight, the porter said, was Sir John von Mainhardt; and that knight our crusaders knew had been placed under the ban of the empire for his evil deeds, but particularly for having robbed the Archbishop of Mayence.

"Call out your men," said the Unknown, "and have them arranged in the court here to be ready for any who may chauce to dodge in. Now, Sir Engelbert, we will out upon them, while Robert and Bermard follow to scatter the hirelings."

Thus speaking the Black Knight closed his visor, and having loosened his ax, and couched his lance, he called upon the porter to throw back the gate. As the way was thus opened, six of the men-at-arms were seen bringing up a heavy log, with which they meant to batter down the wicket. The movement of Sir Otto and his companion, when they beheld this unexpected presence, was one of, astonishment; but ere they could betray much emotion our hero

"How now, Sir Knights—what would ye here?" "Who are you that dares question Orto of Metzinger?" the robber retorted. "Just stand where you are and I'll ride thee down as I would a praying

As Sir Otto spoke he gathered up his rein and put spurs to his horse; and with his impious battle cry of, "the spoils to the mighty!" he dashed on. "God and St. Fudvid!" shouted the Unknown, as he braced himself for the shock. He did not nove from the place where he stood. He only bent a keen he braced himself for the shock. He did not nove from the place where he stood. He only bent a keen eye upon the robber, and set his lance for the guard. He felt the power of a giant in his good right arm, and full well he knew that the oncoming knight only rushed upon defeat. He had received too many charges to miss his mark now; and even his horse had been so thoroughly trained that a single word was sufficient for its guidance. With a firm hand the Black Eagle held his lance, and as the robber came dashing upon him a quickly-

With a firm hand the Black Eagle held his lance, and as the robber came dashing upon him a quickly-spoken word caused his horse to kap upon one side, and at the same moment his lance, with a movement almost imperceptible, turned the point of the robber's weapon over the right shoulder, while the steel head of his own spear caught Sir Otto's helm just below the visor and rolled him from his horse upon the ground. Almost at the same moment Sir John von alainhardt fell beneath the stroke of Engelbert. The Unknown leaped from his saddle and placed his sword at the throat of the falleu knight. "Now yield thee, recreant knight!"

"Now yield thee, recreant kuight!"
"But to whom?" asked Otto, in struggling ac-"To the Black Eagle of Palestine!" shouted our hero.

"Mercy!" gasped the vanquished man. "Why didn't you tell me so?"
"But do you yield?"

"And if I spare thee, wilt thou give me thine bath that thou wilt not trouble this place again?"
"The terms are hard." "But is not life valuable? Remember-I would kill thee as quickly as I would any other robber!"

"Spare me! I promise."
"Then upon thy knees and take the oath. That is the order!"

Sir Otto hesitated a while, but at length he got upon his knees, and with the cross of the crussders' sword before him, he took the prescribed oath. "Well done, Sir Otto von Metzinger. Now call thy robber crew off, and go in search of some more legitimate game."

In the meantine the two esquires had been doing a heavy work among the men-at-arms. Robert of Swingenhoffen was like a wild bull among them, while Bernard stalked about like a stork among frogs. Their long experience against the Saracons had given them notions of combat of which their land diverges the stork of the huddling adversaries knew nothing. Three of the robber-retainers were slain outright, while most of rebber-retainers were slain outright, while most of the others were either senseless upon the ground or crawling away with cracked or aching heads.

Sir John von Mainhardt, as soon as he knew who his captor was, readily took the same oath that his companion had taken, and then they were allowed to depart; though ere they did so the latter poured out his ennity and threats profusely.

"By the holy host, Sir Crusaders, you have ventured into a nest of hornets, as you shall find to your cost. If you get out of these mountains with a whole skin you'll be fortunate!"

With this threat upon his lips, the robber-knight

With this threat upon his lips, the robber-knight turned to where his men-at-arms were searching for their senses, and ere long the whole party rode off— all save the three dead ones, their bodies being left for the monks to dispose of.

Blessings, deep and sincerc, were showered upon the two crusaders when they returned to the convent; and, when they heard of the oath they had made the marauders take, the abbess could not speak her gratitude. A hearty breakfa breakfast was eaten, and after this the two knights signified their intention of departing. The storm of the previous evening had passed away, and the air of the spring morning was fresh and fragrant.

Do you go near Stuttgart?" the abbess asked. "Directly thither," the Black Knight answered.
"Then you will casily reach it before dark if your orses are strong."

horses are strong."
"Certainly."
"I have a favor to ask of thee," the abbess resumed, addressing him of the Eagle. "The Lady Agnes had been for several days watching for some friends who had promised to come and conduct her to Stuttgart, where she would go to see her cousins, Constance of Baden, and Blanche of Wurtemburg. They may not come for a long while, and if you will accept the charge I shall give her into thy keeping, for safe delivery at the castle of Evenhard von Wurtemberg."

temberg."
"Everhard von Wurtemburg!" repeated the Black Eagle. "The Wild Knight of Swabia?"
"Yes, Sir Crusader. He is surely the wildest knight in all Christendom; and the most jealous of restraint. Even the Emperor he sets at deliance, and claims all mankind for his foes. He is a strange being, and a cousin of mine to boot. He stands at the head of the robber knights of the empire; but yes he is a brave man, and would scorn a mean ac-He would lie down and die of starvatiou ere tion. he would rob a woman; and his breast he would bear to the sword ere he would srike a foul blow. Be sure he will give thee hearty welcome if you cross not his purpose. But, wilt thou accept the charge?"
"Does the fair lady wish it?" She does.

"Then I accept the trust, and you may feel that

"Then I accept the trust, and you may feel that you hold my life in pledge for her safety."
"I understand," returned the abbess, with a smile; and thus speaking she turned away.

Ere long Agnes von Luxemberg entered the keeping room, all prepared for her journey; and both the knights started as they beheld her strange beauty when thus arrayed. Her riding-robe of purple velvet was bordered with gold, and the inputs velvet can with its drooning ostrich plunes. purple vervet was bordered with gold, and the jainty velvet cap, with its drooping ostrich plumes, cast a warm glow upon her face that was like a halo. She wore a small dagger in her girdle, and in her hand she carried a light whip. Her horse, a noble barb, with a mixture of the Arabian in its veins, manifested the utmost delight when he saw his mistress approach; and when she had been as sisted to her saddle, the pleased animal capered about with unmistakable manifestations of joy.

"Now, mind you," said the abbess, once more addressing the Black Knight, "untill you reach the castle of Everhard the Lady Agnes is my charge to

Then the Wild Knight has some control over her," the Black Eagle said, in a toue so low that the maiden could not hear it.

A dark shade rested upon the face of the abbess, he is her guardian-made so by my brother in his last will. But I have authority now."

Once more onr hero promised to watch well his charge, and the abbess turned to her nicce. There charge, and the abbess turned to her nicce. There were a few sincere blessings—a kiss—a cheerful fare-well—and then the party rode away.

After the lapse of several hours, a as short silence ensued, the Crusader gazed upon his fair companion with an earnest prayer 'ul look. She looked up and met his gaze, and a warm glow suffused her face. She knew not that he was looking upon her, or she would not have gazed upon them, for her eves were beaming with the tale of love, and she knew it. And a less interested person than herseli, and one And a less interested person than hersell, and one with less preception, could not have failed to see that the hnight's gaze was one of pure, devoted af-

It was a moment of strange emotions. Each had detected the other in the act of pouring out the silent language of love. The knight was the first to speak.

"Gentle lady," he said, in a tone-made rich and musical by the deep feeling tont sustained it, "why should two honorable people, whom fate has thrown together, hide the deepest, holiest emotions of their souls? I will not hide mine. You shall not say I could look what I dared not speak. Agnes of Luxemong, I love thee with the whole strength of my heart, and with the undivided power of my heart's first love. Thou art the first maiden who ever awoke the sweet whisper in my soul, and to thee I give my poor heart with all its hopes, its aspirations, and its joys. I trust I have not offended?"

For some moments the fair girl gazed down upon the arching neck of her steed without speaking. She trembled violently, for there was a nighty struggle in her soul.

struggle in her soul.
"Alas!" she at leugth uttered, raising her mois-tened eyes to her companion's face, "would that my love and my duty were united!"

"How, lady? Speak plainly, I beseech thee."
"Knowest thou not that my father willed that I should wed with the Count of Baden?" "I knew he had so wished. Did he lay the command upon thee?' "He never commanded me, sir. His wish was always my law. When he expressed to me his desire, he knew that, if it were in my power to do it, his desire would be accomplished."

"But thy love, lady?"

"Thou art the livet men who ever won my young.

"Thou art the first man who ever won my young heart. See—I am frank because thou hast been."
"Bless thee, gentle Agnes—bless thee for ever.
Thou dost love me, then?"

"With all my heart."

"Then see: We still have ground for hope. If the Lord of Baden be an honorable man, he will not surely hold thee to a uniou from which love must ever be absent. He would not have such a wife if he could."

"Ah—yon know him not!" said Agnes, with a slight shoke of the head. "Nor do you know the man whom my father placed over me as my guardian. Alas! they have no hearts of love or sympathy."

thy."

The knight gazed upon his companion as she spoke, and when she ceased speaking he bowed his head. There was a cloud upon his brow, and his lips were compressed; yet he seemed more worked upon by some lim purpose of his own than by any fears of the powers of others. When he again raised his head his bright eye beamed with more than ordinary meaning.

ed his head his bright eye beamed with more than ordinary meaning.

"Gentle Agnes," he said, "love me—love me well—love me as I love thee—and leave the rest to me. In this universe of good there must be power enough to overcome all evil, if it could only be properly applied, and so why may we not hope that right and justice shall triumph here?"

"My love I cannot control." the maiden answer-

"My love I cannot control," the maiden answermy heart could never give up thine image-my could never forget this, its first holy love. As could never forget this, its first holy love. As true as I live, I speak frankly and truthfully now. Were the painful clause removed; could the barrier be broken down—honorably so—I would place my hand within thine own, and be thine forever!"

The noble kuight raised his hand to his cheek and

The noble kuight raised his hand to his cheek and brushed away a tear, and when he spoke his voice was low and sweet.

"Among the blessings of God, and standing second only to the pure faith of the tried Christian, is bright, sunny hope. Let us cling to it."

Half the afternoon had passed away, and the travelers had just entered upon a broad table of level land, when Engelbert's horse, which was alread, suddenly stopped and placed his nose to the ground, and in a moment more he raised his head and gave a wild, startling snort. wild, startling snort.

'Ah, that means that we are to meet somebody said the Black Knight, as Agnes gazed inquiriugly toward him.

For a moment an expression of fear dwelt upon the maiden's face, but it quickly passed away,

"We have nothing to fear, surely," the Knight resumed. "If they be robbers we have nothing to lose, and if they be not robbers they must le friends.
Yet I'll don'ny casque and take my shield, for war sometimes comes when we least expect it."

As he thus spoke he exchanged his velvet cap for the black steel helm with its triple plume, and then calling to his esquire, he took his shield. Just as Eugelbert had made the same arrangement a party of three knights appeared upon the opposite side of the plain, which was nearly half a mile distant. As the distance became less, an exclamation of fear dropped from Agnes's lips, and when her companion looked upon her, he found her pale and trembling. "The Count of Rudhen" she utered

"The Count of Baden!" she uttered.
"The Count' which one?"
"He that rides upon the right hand—the shortest

"And do you know who are these other two?" Agnes looked a few moments, and then she re-

"Aye-they are two of the most villainous knights "Aye—they are two of the most vinamous anights that ever broke knightly vows. There is Sir Frederick von Boudorf, who came from Bavaria to save his head trom the law; and Sir Marco Montani, a crafty, bloody, and unscrupulous Italian. They are the Count's tools, and do his bidding for hire."
"They look like stout knights," said the Eagle, half to himself.

"And so they are," responded Agnes.
"But you tremble, dearest."
"Aye—the Count may be on his way to Saint Fulvia."

"Ha! For thee! Now I see. And why should he have come? Think you Everhard sent him?"

The maiden pondered a few moments ere she replied, and during her hesitation the Kuight stopped.

"I'll tell thee all in a few words," she at length said, "and thus save thy questions. My guardian will do much for the Count of Baden. He would not for worlds directly do a deed to harm me; yet he looks upon my marriage with the Count as a fixed. looks upon my marriage with the Count as a fixed fact, and he will help it on. Thrice have I refused to go to Baden's stout castle of Heidelbeg, and Rudolf has sworn that he would take me to his dwelling by force, if I would not go otherwise. The las time I saw my guardian he told me in a laughing mood—he laughed because he thinks my corness of the Count is only the result of whim; he does not know that I despise him—he told me to be ware of Rucolf of Baden, for that he meant to kidnap me on the first opportunity. So I think he has come now for that purpose."

The new-comers were now within a few rods. The new-comers were now within a few rods, and as the Count of Baden recognized Agnes he put spurs to his horse. As he did so the Unknown dropped his vizor and secretly loosened the strap-

"Ha, my little truant!" the Count cried, as he drew up a few yards off. "I have found thee most opportunely. I was after thee, sweet one."

With a powerful effort Agnes overcame the tumultuous emotions that shook her frame, and then

"I am on my way to Stuttgart. I am going to the castle of my guardian."
"So you meant when you started. I saw the noble Count, thy guardian, this morning, and he bade me come and take thee. And so you see I have come. Sir Knight, I will relieve thee of thy charge."

charge."
"Were I anxious to give up my charge I might thank thee for thy kindness," returned our hero, calmly and modestly. "But, as I assumed the charge for a specified purpose, I must do my pledge. Still, you will allow me to thank you all the same."
The young Count was at first puzzled by this. He was young for the place of power he occupied, being not yet thirty; but he had had much experience, and was accounted one of the best and surest lauces in Baden.

uces in Baden.

Before he could answer, however, their attention Before he could answer, however, their attention was called in another direction, where two more knights had appeared upon the field. Agnes jof Luxemburg drew a long, painful breath, and her cheek once more blanched with fear, for in the two horsemen who had thus made their appearance she recognized Sir Otto of Metzinger and John of Mainhardt! She knew that their souls were full of revenge against her noble lover; and is it a wender that she trembled with the thought of her two faithful friends meeting these five full-armed knights? ful friends meeting these five full-armed knights? Explosion and Loss of Life.—A fire-damp occurred at Governor's Creek coal urine, Chatham county, N. C., on Monday last, resulting in most serions consequences. Superintendent Dunn and four other men were instantly killed. Another's life is despaired of. The destruction of everything around was complete. The company, I understand, have recently invested (or were about investing), $2,500,000 in working them. This is the second explosion attended with fatal effect which has taken place at these mines the present year.—Richmond Enquerer.
